

The Lost Nerve is an autobiography of a woman who became disabled after a devastating sciatic nerve injury from an intramuscular injection into the left buttock in a hospital to treat a very high fever on the eve of her first birthday. She wrote this book for mothers of special needs children and to inspire many others who have suffered the consequences of serious medical mistakes. All her young life she was driven to become independent from her family, longing to get a good job in the city and buy a car. She joined the university and despite many challenges, graduated with honors and later bought a car. The Lost Nerve is an inspiring recount of an interesting life, a tale of courage even when she felt fear in her gut, because she knew that there were more important things than that fear. She immigrated to Canada and later when she learned about reconstruction surgery for FGM victims pioneered by Dr Pierre Foldes, she did not hesitate to go for it as she had been subjected to FGM when she was a few days old, and hopes to motivate other FGM victims to reclaim their femininity. The book illustrates the impact of one medical mistake and the consequences in her life.
